

This book is for all ages, as soon as you can comprehend. You might even read it to your children before they can spell. Perhaps, one day it may even be required reading in junior high schools around the world, or what's left of it! I have purposely done this piece in a larger typeface so as to aid those who may be experiencing loss of sight at any age. My findings are not those of a scientist or a doctor—merely the insights I learned as a boy, being raised on farms in central Iowa. But what better place to be from, especially now days! Some findings you may already know about, but I am sure there are a few things that you may still require within your own arsenal for personal consideration. Did you know, for example: beef requires three days to pass through your digestive track and that pork requires five days? Everything else eaten goes right through you, around this undigested flesh. A person of 50 years like myself, who had raised animals for slaughter, finally had to rethink this part of the equation. Was I killing them, or were they eventually killing me?

I have also had the chance to write this book for all of you who are still on that pathway to learning about your own physical form. Male or female, young or old, this book could make the difference in the length of time for an entire life. I hope that it eventually changes the way you do practically everything. I feel as though it could improve your life in ways not yet even dreamed of. Hopefully, you will gain some new tips on taking care of this wonderful mortal form for the duration of time that you are allowed to exist here. It doesn't take a lot of brains to read, and requires only common sense to remember. Besides that, all of these suggestions are free! So now, what do you have to lose? With this new information you can better understand exactly how to take care of that "temple" (your body) that we all have been given.

This short stay is really intended as purely a "learning experience." What matters most, is how much can be learnt in the length of a lifetime! My thanks to everyone who has helped me with this project to date; John Thomas, you are definitely one of them. I also cannot help but mention my very best teachers of all at this time...the Creators, who sincerely hope that this "Word" will one day cross all lines of division upon this planet. And then, truly make us all into "one" singular family, which they have intended from the very start.

Chapter 1

Asking the Right Questions?

In my lifetime I have seen men land on the moon. I have had the chance to witness more than half of what this last century had to offer in scientific achievements. I have observed findings using the Hubble Space Station and its telescope that have confirmed my own personal feelings concerning this physical universe. This book lays out some new facts relevant for today. There will be many more of these soon to be realized as well. Perhaps, one of yours will be the next? Let me tell you, I never thought that I would ever come up with a find like this!

If any of you wish to disagree with any of these 21st century findings, that's perfectly all right. There have always been disbelievers. This is also part of the yin and yang of life.

I wait with baited breath for the day to arrive when all that's needed is to scan the body with a hand-held device in order to obtain an honest opinion of both the problem and the steps to be taken in order to correct whatever deficiency the body is currently experiencing. Believe me when I say that the days of "Star Trek" are here before us now! The thing we all need to realize is that it is by electrical energy that we will one day fly, and not by some tank of fuel. Our future depends not on oil but on the speed of rediscovering how to employ this veritably endless supply of energy...the force that makes all of these things happen, which is electricity. Some things are still yet unknown, and for some very good reasons!

1993: The morning was average for a California summer, hot but clear. I'd gotten up and walked out into the front room of my apartment. The news that day was reporting on the worldwide epidemic called "cancer." The report that morning stated that younger and younger victims of this disease were being reported from Africa to Asia, as well as all parts of the globe. I can still remember hearing back in the sixth grade that cancer was a disease that affected the lungs of cigarette smokers, but only after several years of continuous exposure. There hadn't been any other reports of this strange disease, so I just assumed it was the lungs that it would catch in.

Then, after a few years had gone by, I started to hear reports concerning a multitude of different types of cancer starting to infect the human body! I was a little bit more than concerned. I began to not only read, but to try to figure out this problem in my own head. I had been raised in the country. Not a whole lot of toys to play with but a never-ending amount of back yard experiences. Raising animals of all different varieties was one type of education most youngsters don't ever get. I had the chance in 4-H to begin to earn cash and then to turn it over, starting at the age of ten raising hogs. One thing I can still remember was my dad saying that "If you wanted something bad enough, and were willing to work just as hard as you could, in time you very well could achieve practically anything that you set your mind on."

So by now this cancer problem was getting to be worldwide, and more than likely would affect me one day soon. I was 35, but felt as though I was 65. I had a kidney removed in seventh grade from internal complications; that was all the doctors could (or would) say. Then at age 25, I suffered a brain aneurism, similar to a hemorrhage, just a little smaller in size. I lay in a coma state for nearly three weeks. When I awoke from this little vacation at the St. Paul Ramsey Hospital, I was well on my way to an early grave.

Only 3% of the population ever recovers from this type of medical occurrence. So I felt more than fortunate to be acquiring my street clothes again. Most all of these patients experience some type of physical complications following recovery. I had none except for a "fuzzy memory" of recent events. I can still remember being wheeled to the front door in a chair only to have to catch a city bus to get home.

I have the pleasure to say, that I have worked at a lot of different types of jobs in my day. Some were more difficult than others, but after awhile they all get to be somewhat of a repeat. My employment has ranged from farm work to computer engineering to a counter job on Venice beach. At my age of 35, I was lucky to still be able to find work anywhere. Nobody in Los Angeles it seems, needs a manual laborer who's recovered from a kidney removal and a coma. At least no-one that I had met yet.

The rest of that day, my mind was turning over some of the facts that I had collected over my many years of reading. It wasn't until the following morning when I got up and walked outside that these new realizations finally started to stream into my brain. I had learned at an early age that to force any fluid through a metal pipe would cause the electron in the fluid to orbit in a northerly direction. (Fig. 1) I also remembered that all insect electrons stay in a 180 degree rotation to the north as well. This is the very electron that surrounds the H_2O molecule that all species on the planet Earth are made of. Humans and most all warm-blooded creatures rotate 180 degrees to the south, all except for bats and cats, which rotate like the insects to the north.

I could also remember learning in junior high about the "Corriallis Effect"—that the water flushes down the toilet in two different directions on the planet. Counter clockwise on the northern side of the equator, and clockwise on the southern side. A man named Corriallis had proven this differential fact, but no one that I had ever heard of could explain to me how or why this fact existed. I thought to myself, "What if the reason for this abnormality was caused from drinking this incorrectly spun fluid, on the molecular level? Could the gravity effect have anything to do with this unknown disease's effect on younger and younger victims? I understood that the center of this planet that we're standing on is shrinking in size as its molten core eventually cools down. But could this change make that much of a difference in the gravity effect being experienced?"

I had an older piece of paper hanging on my bedroom wall dated 1991 and entitled, "Ask the Space Scientist Archive." The question I had asked one day long ago was: "Exactly what is gravity?" The answer that I received was: "We do not know. We can define what it is as a field of influence, and with general relativity we can define a language that states that it is a property of our real world that is mathematically equivalent to not just the geometry of space-time, but equivalent to space-time itself. Some think that it is made up of particles called gravitons, which flit about at the speed of light just as photons do. In any true fundamental sense, we do not know what gravity is; we only know how it operates in various corners of our universe. Without gravity, there would be no space and time." I seldom ever take what a person says for a fact anymore, at least not until I had proved it to myself.

The Muscle Beach Café where I worked was the corner shop that anchored a larger concrete structure at the junction of Ocean Front Walk and 19th Avenue in Venice California. This job was at the water's edge! The location is called "Muscle Beach" (Fig. 2) since the weight-lifting facility had recently been rebuilt there. I had landed a job selling coffee and worked the early shifts. I left my house that morning and walked across the alley. I had begun the day before trying to rationalize an understanding as to exactly what could be the cause of this unknown problem.

The afflicted were certainly all different in race, color, and language. They ate different foods, and they all had different living conditions. They even lived on different continents of the world. But the one thing that they all did the same was to drink north-spun fluids! This was fluid that was forced through metal pipes! Could this seemingly small differential make that much of a difference? It couldn't be that simple, could it? The human species certainly should have realized this most significant fact in life.

This was the beginning, but only the start. I was working on something that I had realized in a state of delayed panic. If I was right, someone else would probably come up with this realization simultaneously, and so claim the dubious honor of discovering the cure for this ever-spreading modern day epidemic. I wasn't as concerned with the discovery as I was with the healing principles involved. These principles had never been discussed or applied anywhere that I had ever heard! Not in this country at least.

The very next day, I started by swinging a 5-foot chain around in a circular direction. First, I swung it in a clockwise rotation to the right for a few minutes. I noticed no physical effect. Then next, I tried it in a counterclockwise rotation or left spin direction. What a surprise! I could actually feel the relief from the chains whirling around and around in just a few short minutes. It seemed to me as if the left spun electrons came down out of my arm and where then pulled into the center of the whirling circle of chain! After a few minutes of swinging the chain in a large circular motion, end touching the ground (in order to release these left spin electrons being removed from my body), I felt better! I knew that I was on to something completely unheard of. I even got to the point in time of placing my hands in fingerless gloves in order to twirl a much heavier chain. (Fig. 3)

I practiced this exercise for months, at times standing in a small tub of water. I reasoned that the fluid I was standing in could increase the amount of charge being removed from my body. All of these trials were part of my own self-education on north spun electron removal. Have you ever thought about this thing we all call gravity? The time to reconsider this fact is now! The gravity that you are experiencing is directly related to the amount of left spin electrons that have collected in your physical form; which is made up of right spin (south spun) electrons.

Next, I designed and then began to build a 6-foot tall metal box. Within, rotated a large loop fixed to the center of a metal pole. The circular rotation was to the left. (Fig. 4) The plan was to have the subject stand in a running shower with wrist, ankle cuffs and a helmet connected to his body. Wires were hooked to these various parts and were designed to remove the north spun current from the body by rotating the steel axle within the device in a counterclockwise rotation. The hollow loop in the center of the shaft would cause this left spun electron to accumulate there and then could be drawn down the shaft by fluid, finally to be removed into a large bucket of water. This excess (L.S.) charge (when removed from the body) could be placed into a battery or some other device for later use.

In time, this L.S. charge will make it difficult for the average person even to walk. This is what "old age" was all about. To effectively remove this left spun effect is the process I came to call "de-charging." The process would require some time, but perhaps not that much depending on the person's age? All of these considerations came to me rather suddenly, in a rapid flow of realization. I am sad to say, due to complications involved in the cutting of a large piece of quartz for the axle to spin upon, I was not able to complete this project to the point of testing. It was then shelved for later consideration.

I had begun reading several books concerned with healing the body. One interesting woman from Minnesota had written a book that explained how to build a small box using parts obtained from your local electronics store. Two hand-held copper bars with cables ran from the unit. The person was instructed to hold the bars in hand for seven minutes before turning this device off. After performing this process three times, the electrical current generated by this device rids the body electrically of all of the microscopic yeast particles that have managed to enter the cell walls and have continued to collect throughout your body's cellular structure. So I bought the parts, built the device as specified, and I have to say that it works! The only trouble was that all the bread that I ate from that day on was the same as the bread that I had consumed previously. So the condition eventually returned.

The author was firmly convinced that this is the cause of the common cold, as well as most everything else that plagues the human system. She attributes this unwanted yeast mold to the fact that the bread we are all eating is wrapped immediately prior to being cooled down to room temperature. These warm conditions cause the cooking process within the dough to continue even though the oxygen level has been cut off. Wrapping the product immediately after coming from the oven causes this mold effect to occur from the lack of oxygen. It is these yeast deposits that eventually work themselves into our own cells that are causing many of the problems experienced in health as well as later dietary complications. I couldn't argue with any of these findings. The real problem seemed to be the re-education of the entire population.

Many other pieces of literature that I happened to read clued me in further to facts that I had never known existed. In one book the author explains the natural electrical current that exists in everything there is. He explores a whole new way to detect the amount of usable energy in anything by holding a small chain in one hand. Put one end of this small chain in between your index finger and thumb, let the opposite end hang. Take the questionable said item in the other hand. If a positive energy is present the chain swings to the right; if negative, the chain swings to the left, and is considered non-eatable. The book explains that after an apple tree has grown up and begins to yield its fruit, the soil may have become depleted naturally of certain minerals. The trees need these deficient minerals re-added to the surrounding soil once again in order to be able to produce healthy fruit. The author suggests this as the reason why fruit or vegetables may be grown in an uneven fashion. Apples that are bigger or smaller on just one side are one example of this deficiency in the soil.

Many of these books recounted the most unique electrical findings that their authors had discovered for themselves! It wasn't until I had thoroughly digested the book Young Again written by a very special man named John Thomas, that I was convinced that there really was something to the difference in north and south spun fluids. I wound-up purchasing a water filtration system from this author's company and started to drink my first glass of conditioned right spun water, or what could be called my first sip of "south spun fluids." This water actually tasted different, like there had been something added to it. I couldn't describe exactly what it was but it tasted like there was just more to it than before, and "smoother." Since then, I have spoken to John and he has invited all of you to call in (509-465-4154) for a FREE copy of his wonderful book! I highly recommend that you do this immediately. All it will cost you is shipping! I keep it along side my own Bible at home. I never know when I'll need either one, or both!

Over the years, I have come across several devices that could be used to influence the molecular spin of your fluids: a coffee cup and an egg (used in the refrigerator) that magically conditions your fluids in just a few seconds. Also, a fashionable wine bottle rack and a shot glass holder that claimed it would age your liquors ten years in just a moment! I couldn't believe what I was finding. Books had been written about this effect and a few devices were available, but no one had realized the entire equation. No one had realized that this effect called cancer would one day touch us all.

Chapter 2

The Magic Pen

The afternoon was clear as I walked across the alley to the coffee window. It was just another perfect day on the beach. I was off so I decided to buy a cup of the old java juice. As I waited in line behind a rather tall gentleman, I had the chance to observe him pull out what resembled a silver pen from one of his shirt pockets. He then proceeded to bend over and hold it vertically about an inch from the side of his cup. He held it there for what seemed like no more than 15 seconds. He then promptly returned it to its chosen spot. Since I had been drinking only water influenced by my new system, I was most interested in the process that I had just witnessed.

I asked the man to explain to me what I had just seen! We sat down that afternoon, he categorically explained to me how he had "south spun" his beverage by using this one-of-a-kind "Magic Pen." He had actually changed the molecular rotation of all of the electrons in the fluid to spin from north to south electrically. By doing so, he had made the beverage agree with his own body's molecular make-up.

He then proceeded to tell me about the company he worked for back home in Germany. This company recovered pockets of this "south spun water" from within the earth's very crust in places found all around the world. It seems that the molten lava within our planet cools as it shrinks in size and gives off steam. When cooled, this steam turns back into water. This water (because of its unique properties) collects and forms pockets of only "south spun fluid." This is completely different from the normal water on our planet's surface that can be influenced to spin molecularly to either the north or south direction, depending on the influencing factor. Sometimes these special deposits of water are large enough to be detected by a person using dowsing rods or metal wands. The company he represented drilled for this unknown resource and the recovery was astounding. I was truly amazed.

That afternoon, I purchased two of these special pens and began to spin all of the fluids that I drank. I thanked him for all the information he had shared with me. I was feeling better and better as time went on. I had started down this new road of discovery with some of the old enthusiasm I had known only as a boy. I found that this particular area of study had even more enlightening facts than I had been taught in any school anywhere! I read that at one time, submarines had been detected during time of war with a technique using just a paper map and a string with a weight attached. This weight could be described as swinging in a "pendulum effect." The weight would swing two different directions, one at a time, indicating the exact position of the unseen enemy. The only thing necessary was to enlist a person capable of performing such a feat, and there were those that could!

I continued to read as if I were in school again. All these things were starting to sound more like fantasy than an actual fact! How could these amazing things have been glossed over with time? I felt as if I was being shown a pirate's chest, hidden in secret for all this time.

Chapter 3

Sign of the 666

One afternoon during the summer 1996, I was sitting in my front yard. I had been drinking all of my fluids using this "south spun effect" for over three years. I thought to myself that day: if this effect called cancer is the problem, on a worldwide scale, then how is anybody going to be able to fix it? Surely, there are not enough of these "south spin pens" to give one to everyone in the United States, let alone the entire planet.

At that moment, and I do not take any responsibilities for this myself, my hand automatically curled making the three-finger position, with the thumb touching all of my three fingers (index finger extended). Kind of like making a "666" with your left hand! I had been drinking a can of soda pop using my right hand. My left hand turned sideways and came across to the side of the beverage, I stared down at it for about 45 seconds; I had effectively flattened my soda!

I was totally flabbergasted once again! I looked up. I couldn't believe it! Three fingers of my own south spun blood seemed to affect the fluid in my can in exactly the same way that the magic pen had done to the cup of coffee. I felt that day as if someone was laughing! I reasoned with time that the "south side" of a magnet would do the same thing to the fluid as the pen and my new hand position had just accomplished as well.

From that day on, I have drunk fluids influenced by my own three fingers. I put away the pens for a while. The magnets I used to stick in my refrigerator in order to influence all of the fluids stored on the shelves below. I ended up throwing my water filtration system away with time. I didn't need it anymore. A whole new methodology in the drinking of all liquids had now been presented to me!

You see, we all have this ability to correct the spin of the electrons in the fluids that we consume each day. (Fig.6) This technique only takes about 12 seconds to achieve! What is needed now is for the entire planet to become aware of these new facts. So I began by alerting my friends and family about this most recent discovery that I had made. Some continue to laugh at the idea even years later. I can't help but remembering the old saying, "He who laughs last laughs best." But then, "time" waits for no one.

I had only one male cousin named Steven Kaas. He was about a decade older than me. He had died during the 1990's. This man had slowly, over time developed a case of stomach pains, finally deciding a trip to the hospital was needed. He expired during exploratory surgery. His death was attributed to a severe case of stomach cancer. This man had never smoked anything, nor did he do any drugs or drink alcohol with any regularity. He had actually flown some of the first F14 jet fighters off of an aircraft carrier while serving in the Air Force. He had always been a person that I wanted to be more like, simply because of his own personal accomplishments.

I wondered now if the fluids that he had been drinking all of his life could have caused this effect to occur? I also considered the food he had eaten, at least for a portion of his life? Perhaps I thought, he could have consumed a large amount of micro-waved foods, maybe in the Navy.

In 1972, I was a sophomore in high school. I had heard that within the borders of the former U.S.S.R. (now Russia) that micro-wave ovens were strictly forbidden to be brought into the entire country. To bring one in meant that you would immediately be executed! Pretty harsh words! At the time there was no explanation given, but I can still remember that here in the United States these non-conventional devices were touted as the hottest new invention just released and promoted to this day. Declared the latest and greatest cooking device yet, truly a space-age wonder! Many people whom I have known eat micro-waved foods! Could this have any kind of a negative effect on them over time?

I wondered, why would the U.S.S.R. do such a harsh thing as that, back then? Now my suspicions were beginning to make a little bit more sense. But there were still some unanswered questions. It seemed that the reasons were still somehow, just out of reach! None of our own scientists had ever mentioned a word. What was really going on inside of my own body? I couldn't believe that they had no knowledge of these facts.

So I then decided to make up 5x8 inch cards with my new concept illustrated and began to hand them out (Fig. 7,8). I also had T-shirts printed the next year. My apartment was only a stone's throw from the boardwalk so I was able to get passers-by to come and sit down for a few minutes and listen to my dissertation concerning the newest facts that I had recently found. This gave me some idea of how hardheaded our general populace was concerning these new findings! This was going to be one long hot summer. I was able to practice my delivery and hone my subject matter until the fall of that year. By then, things just weren't moving fast enough. I felt as if I was still just paddling upstream! Something else needed to happen, but what?

It was just another Sunday afternoon. A friend named Jake had stopped by and brought with him his new girlfriend Aimee. We sat and talked at the bar in my house that day. I explained to her this new concept that I had been brought to only a few years earlier. She then promptly tried it on her can of beer and was just as surprised as I was the first time by the "flattening" effect. They had only stopped by for a few minutes, so we said our good-byes and I wished them both well.

It wasn't until later that week. I was standing in my front yard looking down the alley. Who to my surprise did I see but Aimee (Jake's girlfriend) coming around the corner. She wasn't alone either. Beside her walked another girl approximately the same age—I'd guess 23. They both promptly walked up to my fence. Aimee reached out and shook my hand enthusiastically introducing her friend. I invited them to come in. She then asked me if I could demonstrate the technique that I had explained to her the previous Sunday once again for her friend.

After the demonstration, the two of them looked at each other and then at me excitedly. "What would you say too shooting a video concerning this subject?" Aimee asked.

Well, that was the day I was waiting for! I didn't have any prior experience editing film or using a camera, but Aimee and her friend had. They had already done a bit of work in high school using the camera and equipment provided. They were confident that we could pull this project off as well. So Aimee and I started to write what eventually became "A New Cure for Cancer."

When we finished the video, it was 22 minutes long. We both hoped that one day the TV networks might play it during the supper hour for everyone's benefit. We ended up cutting the run time down to 10 minutes, and I then placed it on the Internet on the YouTube.com, where it has been to this day. I still had more work to do. Thoughts kept coming to me every day. I started by contacting selected individuals and asking them to view this latest discovery that I had made. I hoped that someone somewhere would listen now.

One of my three sisters, Susan Mary, had been the brainiest of the bunch. She had graduated from the University of Iowa, winning one of only two scholarships given out each year to graduates wishing to attend UCLA for further studies in the Chemistry field. When she completed her program there, she was offered a job working for the prestigious "Proctor & Gamble Company," located in Cincinnati Ohio. This job required scientific research for one of the biggest drug companies in the world.

That weekend she had flown out to Los Angeles, to speak at a seminar for a large group of doctors. I can still remember her sitting in my front room, listening to my somewhat absurd observations concerning the spin of the electron in the fluids that we all consume. After the reasons that I laid out, she quite frankly told me to "Stick to the electronics field and let the medical professionals work on that particular problem." She told me that the most advanced techniques in science could only determine the electron rotation by capturing a still picture of it. There hadn't been any other determinations that our modern-day physics had come to other than that. She then reassured me that one day soon, science would discover a cure. She bid me farewell that day. It wasn't until years later that this sister had to undergo surgery to remove an early detected cancer complication in one of her breasts. Some people, no matter how intelligent they are, just haven't caught on yet and I do not fault them. I love them all.

There have been geniuses since the beginning of time, now in the grave for this same reason, but what a world it would be without them. Many of us would still be living in caves or tents were it not for their own personal accomplishments.

Chapter 4

Your 7-Year Cellular Rebuild Cycle

I have always been interested in staying abreast of the new findings in all areas of present day research. One of the very first library books that I ever checked out in my fourth grade year was called 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea written by a well-known author by the name of Jules Verne. I started then, reading all kinds of books and magazines in the fields of science as well as the arts, religions, and many other areas involving technological achievements. Over 25 years ago, I can recall reading an article about a group of research specialists who had discovered what has since come to be known as the "Human 7-Year Cellular Rebuild Theory." This all takes place within our own bodies!

Did you know that it has become an accepted fact in medical science today that within the human system, the hydrogen and oxygen cells replace themselves completely every seven years? This happens continuously for the length of our entire lives. This is now a known scientific fact, but how does this thing called "age" come into play? Especially, if my own cells were refreshing them-selves automatically every seven years? Shouldn't I stay younger looking? What was this aging effect that I was experiencing? There seemed to me, to be at least two differing points of view. Many of our newest discoveries are not fully realized for years just because the person lacks the credentials necessary to get any attention paid by the experts or industry in that particular field of concern. Now days the internet should be able to change this fact with time!

This rebuild theory was one of those science facts that I had read and then filed away in my brain, along with all the rest of the scientific mumbo-jumbo that I had accumulated over the years. It dawned on me at this time that if my body was actually rebuilding its own cells every seven years; wouldn't it make sense to correct the spin (influence) of the all of the fluids I was drinking in order to do this cellular rebuilding correctly? I started to consider this as the possible reason for many of our present day ailments. Could this be the reason for the "old age" effect as well as all the rest of our never-ending physical problems being experienced all different ages now?

I pondered these brand-new thoughts for months. I started to consider some of the conditions known as being overweight, balding, arthritis, and the need for glasses, due to failing eyesight. I had begun to lose my own sight about five years ago; I now needed glasses to write this book, and what about Alzheimer's, and the break-down of our own nervous system? Could all of these different symptoms be caused from the same exact problem? (Fig.9)

I started to think that the appearance of everyone who was 40 years of age and older was actually caused by drinking this incorrectly spun fluid. Instead of the old story that I'd been taught; age is just something that comes naturally! This effect called aging wasn't the will of "God" at all then! Could it be mankind's own failure to listen and remember what was paramount in times past? It started to seem to me as if this self-inflicted condition was my own stupidity—that these epidemic conditions even existed at all was my own darn fault. What kind of a plan for a life experience was this anyway! Actually, God wasn't ever going to fix this one, I had to.

I could already tell that something different was happening with my own physical form. My body had developed a thin white line which ran across the center of all of my finger nails. I thought that this was quite strange when I noticed it for the first time. With time, my entire set of nails, both hands and feet turned from a darker to a lighter shade, much like that of a child. My hair, which had become a frosted color of gray over the years, has now slowly returned to brown once again.

Now, I am not saying anything against all of those cosmetic treatments. All, that I can recommend, is to do exactly as I have done. To effectively renew from the inside out, nothing more. I am now 53 years of age. I still have just a very little gray on the sides of my head of hair, but that will disappear in time, as well. To someone as worn down as I had become physically, this was truly incredible to see and to feel. My body has always been weaker than that of my peers. Now I am feeling better than I have for my entire life long...in more ways than one.

One day a buddy of mine had stopped over with a friend to talk about the purchase of a surfboard. While at my place, I sat them down and had them watch the short video that I had recently completed entitled, "A New Cure for Cancer." Soon as it was over, Mike's friend Steve stood up and asked, "Have you ever tried to get this into a film festival?" With original thoughts of putting it on the web as a public service announcement, I never considered a film festival submission until then.

Recently moving to Los Angeles from the East Coast, Steve was a social worker turned filmmaker. With previous experience volunteering at Sundance Film Festival, he suggested we trim it down and then submit it for their upcoming festival. Once complete, he hand-delivered it to their office as did thousands of others for only a total of sixteen available winning slots. Although this film was not officially accepted, Steve still brought it to Park City, Utah and shared it with attending members, while providing copies to program directors at other upcoming festival events. With more than 30,000 hits and climbing on the YouTube, this concept is now available to every person on the planet who has access to the Internet.

With the fall of the Twin Towers and the Iraq-Afghanistan involvement still in high gear, there just weren't any ears willing to listen, not even for a moment. No one was interested or even seemed to care. When he returned, he convinced me that I needed to do more. What I needed was another video. One that would go a little further into the facts that had been learnt ever since that first day and would cover the subject matter a little bit differently. This piece would explain the "7-Year Cellular Rebuilding Cycle" from a whole new perspective. I would also mention my feelings concerning the overweight condition that younger and younger children were presently experiencing, as well.

I tried to attribute this seemingly strange condition to the fact that the children were storing their left spin electrons in water weight, instead of in their muscle fibers and along their bone structure. These left spin electrons were the result of the digestion process as well as the fluids being consumed. Something that modern-day science had never heard of before! I recommended this new technique to them for the very first time, as well as to people who suffer from heart attacks and many other types of illnesses due to this “break-down” within their own system. All of these conditions I attributed to the fact of drinking continuously, for an entire lifetime, “in-correctly” influenced fluids. After getting video number two on YouTube, I took another breath. I had been doing everything I could think of ever since that first day of discovery.

One of my many, many roommates over the years was a guy named Johnny. He worked professionally as a percussionist. He had been a good friend of mine and worked at this profession for most all of his life. He had offered to take the second DVD to work with him on different gigs. Many famous people in the Hollywood area have extravagant parties right in their own homes! Over the months of 2007, he was able to put the information into the hands of Al Gore, Willie Nelson, Stevie Wonder, and Paul Anka, just to name a few. I’ve been able to get a copy delivered into the hands of Matt Groening, who wrote “The Simpsons,” and Larry Flint, owner of Hustler Magazine.

I was also able to send an invite to several more people, including Patrick Swayze, Clint Eastwood, and Hillary Clinton. I advised them all to watch both of the videos that I had created and put on YouTube in hopes of catching their attention. I sent other letters to Oprah Winfrey, Larry King, and Lou Dobbs of the Cable News Network. (Fig. B) Later on, I mailed the Des Moines Register, The New York Times, and the Los Angeles Times, as well. Now, I don’t mean all in one year! It took a lot more time than that.

An article that had appeared one morning in the Sunday Papers sounded like a scathing update on the use of our friendly Internet. This particular reporter cheered at how recently the FTC (Federal Trade Commission) had finally started to close down sites claiming to cure cancer for a price! There were sites that claimed that certain Asawii berries (from the Amazon) could do the trick! There were others that boasted that vitamin B17 was all that was needed to stay young! Still others had remedies of their own from exercise to meditation. I read the article that morning and thought to myself, maybe now, someone was going to start paying some serious attention to this medical problem. The only trouble was; they didn’t have anything to do with medicine, and they weren’t concerned with a cure at all!

At that point, I composed an eight-page summary of my findings to date. I included one of my business cards. I had listed both of my videos appearing on YouTube. I sent them off and haven’t heard another word since. Kind of like fishing—you never know if you are in the right spot until they bite! I sincerely hope that they all realize that what I started doing nearly fifteen years ago really has made a remarkable difference. More than any drug has ever done!

Over the years, I have kicked around the idea of having one of my friends write a script for a television movie concerning this subject matter. My co-producer on "A New Cure for Cancer" was in favor of the idea. I started out working on a treatment. That is, a summary of the scenes and the plot of the proposed piece. But I found that my fingers couldn't keep from finishing this book first. I had never imagined that I would be writing a book, much less finding out something of this magnitude. I didn't have a lot of experience at writing, and I certainly wasn't a professionally trained physician. All I had was plenty of experience on a farm and in the science class dissecting bugs and smaller rodents. But my discovery was unique, and I felt as though enough people on this planet had already died needlessly. So on December 1, 2008, my fingers started to type. I was a bit surprised; it didn't take that long.

The need to explain these different destructive conditions still hasn't been dealt with on a real-time level. Not by our government or any other! I had heard originally in the late 1960s that the radar detectors/guns first used by the highway patrol had caused tumors to occur in the highway officers using these devices. Science had finally deduced that the radar gun itself was the culprit. The manufacturers then included a lead shield, which surrounded the device protecting the user. Then no problems, at least for a while! But there was no discussions held on how this device or any other was causing this effect called cancer to occur? What, when, and why were not even questions dealt with by our sciences! I was dumb founded.

When I was in the eighth grade, I had the experience of raising my first hive of bees. This was the easiest work I'd ever done or will ever do. What a feast for the very little labor involved. Now days, another one of the problems not adequately discussed as well as being handled immediately is the eradication of the honeybee population on a worldwide scale. Could the frequencies used by cell phone operators to communicate be the same ones used by these bees to locate the hives from which they come? If it is, then this could be the "fix needed" for this very, very serious problem. Does anybody even think about where all of the cross-pollination comes from for all of the food we eat each day? If you don't mind doing the chore of pollinating the plants for all of those bees then it's all right, but I think there's more to do than dance around the gardens, especially now days. Bees are part of our history that I certainly wouldn't ever want to consider doing without!

I had to ask myself, could Johnny Cochran's (a famous attorney) brain cancer have been triggered by his own exposure to a continuous small but deadly electrical effect, perhaps caused by his cell phone exposure for so many years? I wondered again and again. Now, you may ask, do these problems really need to be brought to the discussion table immediately, if we in these human bodies wish to continue our search for the true meanings of life? Just to live righteously and die unsure of where I was going has always been a big issue for me personally. Although this is a finite existence, I have always been searching in a most reverent fashion for answers that only a true faith and a wandering imagination can provide. I think that most all of the people around this world could be saved so much anguish from the loss of a father, mother, sibling, or friend to any disease not yet realized by modern-day medicine. I was determined to make a difference!

Energy: A New Source!

New considerations have always made a difference eventually in the way we do practically everything. I have thought many times about the placenta in the body of a woman who is experiencing a pregnancy? What does this organ do other than provide the female system that which is required to gestate another human body? I have considered this from an electrical prospective. Could it be that many of the modern day females, by waiting too long physically (age 40-65), could not knowingly cause the child being developed to suffer abnormal electrical effects? This could be comparable to finally producing an infant who has aged, electrically speaking, 20 years or more by the time of its own birth. This effect would affect the gravitational attraction within this newborn body.

Other negative effects could be attributed to this "older conditioning of the mother," resulting in premature pregnancies as well as many other serious complications later on in the life of the child. The accumulation of this "left spin (electron) effect" could be part of the problem experienced now days with so many births requiring extended hospital stays. Very few of these older women want to try giving birth naturally with no medical staff on hand. At least not many women who I've met lately!

Currently, many of the younger females wish to finish school and start a career long before getting married and bearing children now days. For all of time it has been the women's responsibility for raising this entire planet! Remember now, there are reasons why this is so! Could this be due to our own lack of male maturity, as well as patience when it comes to child-rearing? It is usually not until much later on these days, as I mentioned earlier, that the female is compelled to take a mate or to reproduce completely alone through artificial insemination, sometimes all the way to the age of 50! When this occurs, a child will most likely experience the identical effects of this old aging process.

In a concerted effort, more attention needs to be paid by medical science to this one aspect of our embryo's nine month development. I think it would be a most important step, if we once and for all began to have healthy children born to us...all of the time! I am going to begin experimentation of my own by placing small magnets (south side facing in ward) around the inside of a nylon harness to be worn by the pregnant mother for the duration of a pregnancy up to the delivery day. This attempt may in fact remove these un-wanted north spun electrons while the infant is being manifested within the womb (using only the south spun electron from the pair). You never can tell until you try, and this process is completely non-harmful to the mother or infant.

When was the last time you had to use a can of bug repellent that just didn't seem to work anymore? Some insects can actually develop immunities to most bug sprays in time. I have always had spiders and ants invade my living quarters in the spring and the fall. Usually just because they are hungry!

I learned from my readings that by taking a length of solid number 12 wire and wrapping it a total of eight times around a broom handle (then extend it just a few inches as in Fig.10), you could remove it and place these coils in a room, apartment or garden, up to 10 feet apart on one side of the area. Then, on the opposite side "stagger" the placement with another set of copper rolls placed evenly up to 10 feet apart, as well. Within 48 hours you will experience a completely insect-free environment within this given area. These 2-inch wide rolls of copper wire (remember number 12) put off a "right (south) spin" milliamp effect. Insects are "left (north) spun" in their molecular structure and so cannot stand this annoying effect for long!

The small amounts of electrical current generated by the surrounding loops of wire create an entirely non-habitable environment for almost all insects. Inside their little heads a buzzing sound is detected which eventually drives them away. Even the biggest spiders and roaches will not want to stay within this area for long! Try it and see what kind of fruits and vegetables that you begin to get from your own garden.

When I learned this trick, it was in the early 1990's. I was surprised at just what I could do now on a farm! There was getting to be more to this existence than I had ever considered, practically every day! This all was truly a part of our future.

These concepts, though new, need to be shared with all people at this time, so as to improve the very conditions which we are all experiencing daily. The need is here today. Will we see it happen? I certainly do hope so, but the clock is ticking!

People have been searching for ways to propel their vehicles around town ever since horses pulled wagons. Then one day Henry Ford discovered that his engine would run on gasoline! To think that this revolutionary substance could be refined from the raw oil pumped from the earth. Truly a fossil fuel, and one day scheduled to run out. There was no need to worry about it back then, but it scared me when I first heard about it and I'm even more worried today. Time is quickly running out for us on this special limited commodity. It may be gone sooner than anybody has thought possible. What are we all going to do then?

Right now, more than ever before in history, we need to be experimenting in the electrical energy arena. By using the large bolts of electricity which have been taken from highly charged clouds, we can then use this charge to change the electrical disposition of tiny chips of stone. When this has been accomplished, all that may be needed is to "gold-plate" these "stone generators" with one wire coming out the top of these small but very unique devices. These pieces of conditioned stone could serve to produce the same type of electrical energy similar to the ancient Ark of the Covenant, only much less destructive in their total force because of their small size.

This could be the next source of energy for this new millennium, just as Nicolas Tesla did way back when. This DC charge could then be stepped up using a transformer or some new type of current-conversion to do for all of us what fossil fuel has done for the last hundred years. That is, to keep us warm, cook our food and do most of the hard work for us all! Sounds kind of exciting, I think!

The future is now waiting for all of you to come to this new level of consideration. That is, for those who can to do what needs to be done today, before it is too late! Did you know that Tesla (bless his soul) even designed an engine that ran completely on water! He brought it into the patent office one day in order to register it. After starting and operating it for several minutes, he was forced to take it home. They refused to issue him a patent! Why? They wanted the device explained in detail. He just didn't feel that mankind was ready yet for this new source of energy that he had discovered! Wouldn't it be a huge breakthrough if one of these days you could just fill your car's gasoline tank with water from a hose connected to your house?

It's recorded in history that in 1897, the electron was identified as a negative-charged piece of the atom. Then in 1911, an English scientist named Ernest Rutherford discovered that the nucleus of the atom is composed of both positive and negative-charged protons as well as neutrons. All these parts of our educational process didn't even start until nearly 100 years ago today.

To "south spin" the fluids first, then to separate the hydrogen atoms to be used as fuel for the piston wasn't even considered by anyone but Tesla until that day. The oxygen molecule could then be released to breathe as fresh air. One method to fire his ignition could very well have been from one of these gold-plated chips of stone that was electrically treated first! This all could have transpired at the Tesla site set up in the mountains of Colorado at that time. We'll never know until we try once again. As I have said in this short book, many new and exciting ways of doing the same old things are right now being realized. You are all invited to participate in the discovery of this new frontier. Who knows, you could make the next mind-blowing discovery and remake this entire world we live in!

Soon I truly believe, mankind will actually see the things that we can't even dream of today. "Robotics" is only one area of interest. To tell you the truth, this body that we're in for the rest of this life time is so much more interesting than anything I have ever dreamed! Just to exist in it comfortably has been one of my main goals for this entire life. Now, to find out what we are actually doing here is even more unbelievable news! Could more than one super hero be just around the next corner? We may never know right now, but I think the future could hold more for us than anyone even thinks possible. To learn how to dream on a farm has always been a big part of my life. I've seen how my own imagination can come up with all kinds of new ways of doing things.

Chapter 6

The King's Magic Cup

This chapter is about the people who lived during the famous days of chivalry. This was during the time that has come to be known as the Dark Ages. During this era, most "knowledge" was cut off from the average commoner; printing had not yet been invented, and to read and write was then considered rare. Many tales have been handed down through time of the battles between the more famous knights of the realm. Some of these very brave men fought for the love of a maiden, for power, or just for prestige!

Some of these stories also concerned the existence of what was known then as wizards or magicians. Have you ever heard any of these tales before? These special men were unique in their many talents, and even harder to find! One of the main tests was to have the applicant "work a magic spell" over a cup of wine. The applicant would not be allowed to touch the cup, as the King would watch. When finished, the applicant for the job would present the one glass of wine for the King's discernment. If the King failed to taste a difference in the two goblets of wine (meaning that the applicant was an impostor), the knave would be taken out and was beheaded immediately. Many years went by and many heads rolled over time. No one it seemed was able to change the taste of the cup of wine.

Then one day, a strange little man came to the castle gate. He had a long gray beard and was quite wrinkled. He was much older than all the rest had been. He requested an audience with the King, where he was presented with the two vessels of wine. First, he took out a handful of sand and sprinkled it around the base of one of the cups. He then produced a wand and waved it in the air for a moment while reciting a whispered prayer. Then he magically made a position using his left hand (similar to a 666) while reciting the magic words aloud "Abracadabra, zalica-zam, presto change-o, I'm your man! Taste your Highness and see," said the old man, making a gratuitous bow.

The King then raised the cup of wine that the old man had blessed to his lips and tasted it. A startled look immediately came over his face. Surprisingly enough, it tasted sweet! He then took a sip from the other cup and promptly spat it out upon the floor. "I hereby proclaim that you are now my Royal Magician," said the King as he arose from his throne. From that day on, this appointed "magician" would "work a magic spell" over the King's cup of wine (or keg) each time the King (or any of his loyal followers) decided it was appropriate to enjoy a cup of the fruits of the vine. This man also became a big hit at the local pub (using his magic powers) by influencing most all of the beverages of taste! He also came to be a favored guest with all of the waitresses.

This new technique will make such a difference in taste for all wines of any vintage year! Try it and see for yourself if doesn't improve the taste of your own beverage in only a moment! This technique includes rum, whiskey, and all vodkas! Almost all beverages that do not require carbonation improve remarkably with this simple technique. Remember, the "south side" of a magnet will do the same exact thing! This process will, however, flatten a soda pop or a beer, so be careful what you do with this new technique!

I now believe that our brother Jesus knew all about this trick as well! It says in the book of "John 2" that he turned water into wine. I think that he changed the taste of the secondary wine instead by using this new technique! There are some biblical experts who feel that parts of the New Testament have been altered over time so as to fit the teachings of the Catholic Church. I wouldn't doubt this at all. Besides, all those pictures of Jesus pointing up into the sky now make perfect sense! He's not pointing up to heaven! (Fig. 6) Instead, I now believe that he was trying to teach the three-finger technique to anybody who would listen to him before his early departure!

What about the accounts of him walking on a sea of water (Matthew 14:22, Mark 6:45), besides healing the blind, deaf, and dumb? This man "Jesus" was in fact one of our own brothers, not our "Creator(s)." He actually knew a whole lot more than most living in that day! What he did by dying on the cross for God, was to set the bar for all who wish to make their own judgment day come a little bit sooner! Not too bad for a final incarnation, I would have to say!

Chapter 7

A History of Universal Time

Since the beginning of time, there have been differing points of view concerning the origins of man. This has always remained a rather large unanswered question for me. In this chapter, I would like to try and cover this subject matter using the information that I have gleaned in 52 years of existence. I started out my life in a Catholic family, so I received the normal religious education that the majority of kids do living in the Midwest. The story that I had learned was that of the Adam and Eve scenario—the same one that's found in most popular Bibles.

Since I left home, I began to read as well as hear different theories concerning this phenomenon known as creation. I found that the truth of this matter could not be answered appropriately in just one simple story. This planet that we are on has indeed been visited by none other than the one we all know as "God." That's a fact that has been proven to me without a doubt time and time again. But there are many more things that have happened here since our own galactic beginning.

One version that I have heard takes into account the entire universe (from its inception). Our own Milky Way is only one of the countless galaxies in this present day. These clusters of stars have been forming continuously since the very beginning of time. The story unfolds like this: In the beginning of everything there was only one spirit being (God), and it got restless and finally just plain bored. Can you imagine having the ability to do anything you like? Only trouble is, there is no one else to share these many amazing experiences with. So it decided to separate or divide in order to create more of itself than just being one.

Remember now that these are "spirits" that we are discussing, not human beings! In doing so, it retained the masculine qualities for itself and allowed its own feminine qualities (virtues) to be distributed amongst its own self-created (seven) additional spirits. These in time became known as what we would call "Fe-male." The "eight" of them then decided to create this material plane and what is known today as "space-time," the very "thread" that has run through all that has happened since the beginning.

Understand at this juncture that it was the females that did the work involved in creating; the male half only provided the energy, and then encouraged more. The first of their (female) work was to create the planets. Then they decided to gestate life on a single world for the very first time. This new type of life had limitations, a termination date so to speak. This was something that was completely new! This new "mortal existence" was designed for "experiential incarnations." It was intended to be lived by their-own manifestations, of a thinking humanoid life. Now all of this happened a long, long, long time ago. Before this planet called Earth was ever able to support any life at all.

This all started before the legends ever began here upon this planet.

The story continues...this very first world that was given the gift of "life" was home to a race of beings that stood 100 feet tall. Eventually, this race achieved space flight. They then ventured out into the stars looking for life similar to their own. By now, these beings had learned the "welding way," that is to say that they would harm no one. They had realized their own finite existence and questioned the reasons for it. They had also educated themselves to a very high degree of learning.

Their efforts, sad to say were met with continuous disappointments. They found no signs of life as advanced in evolution, like their own, anywhere they looked. Only plants and some animals scattered here and there throughout the stars.

They did, however, leave behind on their many exploratory journeys (to approximately 200 planets) a living remnant of themselves. This amazing creation was approximately 10 feet tall. It possessed an entirely different type of consideration for itself, different than the animal life which surrounded it. It was designed to "evolve mentally." Something comparable to what our own scientist today are attempting by what can be referred to as called "cloning" using cattle or sheep.

Since then, this very first inhabited world has lost its own ability to support life. This race of beings is now extinct and can now only be remembered in history as the "grassroots" of all present day civilizations.

These various different inhabited planets, seeded with life, have since matured with time. The Earth is only one of these many worlds. Many of these alien planets have in fact had their own unique histories due to specific incarnations by certain individuals similar to our own Jesus, Buddha, and Muhammad. Some have even attained space flight and have visited our world. Most of these visitors are friendly; all but a very few have been hostile.

We here on Earth have been led to believe through our own religious circles that we are the only inhabited planet in this entire universe. It is now time to rethink this equation that we all call life! We humans are NOT the smartest creatures of all time. Let's all realize this now! This reasoning is completely antiquated. It is, in fact, incorrect as many people are coming to realize.

Upon planet Earth, the inhabitants have been allowed a collection of manuscripts over the course of history. These have been organized into a Bible, as well as other ancient scrolls collected from around the world. Practically all of what these stories relate is in fact true. These facts, however, require a little updating in order to fully understand their true meanings in modern day terms. Most likely, it is because there was no rhyme or reason given at the time of their composition other than just a simple judgment day for a final outcome.

I have always felt that this was a little severe considering all the difficulties I had experienced in life. I just didn't understand how I could be created and then destroyed with little care given to my own considerations.

There have been reports in history of human abductions as well as our own Roswell incident. I have always thought that the main theme behind the episodes of the TV series "Star Trek" seemed to ring more true to life than those portrayed in a "War of the Worlds" type of story. Nowadays, there are many sorts of different sightings, all around this world, happening for completely different reasons! It is important to realize this fact. Many of these craft are from different planets with totally different agendas, some being merely for discovery sake. Fact is that they don't all look the same.

Do you still believe there is a God? How about flying saucers? What about "forever and ever?" I do, and for some very good reasons that I have found as well as seen.

Now I'd like you to visualize along with me for just a moment. Imagine, if you can, this entire universe we are in as one large sandbox, so to speak. Now imagine taking just one grain out of this box of sand—this is the planet that we are on right now, called the Earth (or Urantia). When each of us is done with our several educational incarnations (wherever they may be), we will each have the opportunity to experience what has been referred to as your own "judgment day"! Sound scary? It certainly will be for some, guaranteed! However, if you make the grade, you will become inheritors of our "Father and Mother's Universe" (or kingdom, as it was known way back when).

But now, what exactly does all this mean? It means in simple terms that each created male spirit (along with its seven designated female spirits) will be assigned an entire solar system to begin "creating life" within! Much the same as our own Creators did way back when. We all will be given this ability along with so much more than you can even imagine. This would be something akin to raising (incarnating) a really big family over eons of time from a third person's perspective (or something like God's). Not so difficult to understand once you have the pieces assembled!

Now you tell me, does this story sound hard to understand or then to believe? It took me most of my life to piece this puzzle together; this didn't come overnight! But then why not, what else could there be? What else could be the reason for your own spiritual existence? Everything else, it is said, will be granted in time; patience is the key! At the proper time, you too, will be given the ability to remove your own incarnated spirit children from your own "sandbox of life." Then, to present them with their own star system and instruct them on how to begin creating life within (just like we were at one time) a star cluster referred to as a galaxy. At the appointed time, we will be invited to introduce them to their "Grandfather and Mothers," our own Creators. Try thinking about this great event for a moment! That which can only be referred to as; their own "Spiritual Grand parents."

Now I am fully convinced that the contents of the Bible are without a doubt true to fact. I also think that there is a whole lot more not even considered yet within its own pages. This planet that we are on was inhabited with human life long before the "Adam and Eve" scenario ever took place. You will find many, many stories but I still haven't heard of one that predates this most original consideration, nor have I found any better explanation of our own true beginnings. I am always open to new considerations and welcome this ever-evolving saga we call life. I had the pleasure to obtain the main parts of this very unique story from a man of Indian descent, and to tell you the truth, I can't even remember hearing his name.

Chapter 8

A Coming Catastrophe!

In the final chapter of many books that I have read, the authors try to collect the points covered within their own text in an attempt to convince the reader of their own contentions before closing. Instead, I would like to share something totally new with all of you who think that this world will keep on turning around forever and ever. Never imagining for a moment that everything around us could change in no more than a few heartbeats at any time! In fact, one of these days soon when the lights go out, we may have to go back to candles for quite awhile. When they do finally come back on, things will have changed drastically. I was raised in the heartland. You couldn't have convinced me back then that anything was going to change that much. Now over time, I've learned that within just a few short years (six) this planet we are on is going to flip over, that is, it will do a 180 degree shift that will happen in just a few minutes on that special day. Do you know what has to happen in order for this world's entire population to survive? Some very specific things, for sure!

Huge waves, up to 1000 feet high (or more) will roll across all of our oceans and larger seas, cleaning off all of the present day life on shore as we know it today. It would be a very wise decision to relocate inland before this once-in-a-lifetime event occurs, sometime in 2015. The polar ice-cap melting is just one indicator that this event is destined in our near future! There are other indicators as well.

An increase in the intensity of hurricanes as well as the number of tornados has escalated dramatically in the last ten years. Eighty-five of these enormous dust devils were reported in just one night, ripping through what is known as "Tornado Alley" in the Midwest, destroying property and one small town completely! Maybe no one cares to know yet, but they will sooner than later. The accumulation of snowfall is another problem that needs to be considered; over 4 feet reported in just 24 hours in several places this last winter of 2008.

This massive catastrophe that is quickly unfolding could be averted by relocating the population away from the water's edge in time for the coming flip. The very next day, you should be able to move back home, provided it's still standing. This "time that's approaching" is the most serious since the very first day of this planet's creation. Simply because there are so many more people alive than ever before, and so many lives could be lost in just a matter of minutes. I have talked to several people about this subject and their general opinion is to wait and see. I never wanted to get caught with my pants down for any reason, ever since I was a youngster. This preparation is paramount if we humans as a race wish to survive! This approaching time is when it has been said that "no man will be able to exist alone for long."

The conditions which will follow this cataclysmic event will be such that no food will be grown using the sun or soil for approximately seven years (due to climatic changes following this planetary readjustment). It is with the greatest anticipation, as well as fear, that I feel as though some of our own survivors could starve to death from lack of food and supplies! Beans, rice, and corn, I am saying now, desperately need to be grown now and stored in barns and silos during these last six years, throughout the United States (as well as the rest of the world)!

Our own farmers need to hear this news now, so that they can begin to prepare before it is too late! It is only with this type of foresight that we as a planet can ever hope to survive this up and coming event. It would also be a good idea to get set up with a few of those new hydroponic systems that produce vegetables for months from already biogenetically engineered seeds. This would be one way to survive the coming drought, enabling you to produce your own vegetables to eat! Beans, rice, and corn only provide protein for our bodies; vegetables will become a highly valued commodity from that day on. These times they are changing for sure!

There will also be set up at that time, what can only be referred to now as "tent cities" (if we all begin to prepare today). Survivors within the interior, as well as those still alive on our new perimeter will desperately need shelter as well as clothing to survive this interim. Actually it would be a good time to start producing a large contingency of hemp material for tents, nets, rope and many other products. This hemp-made material will last so much longer than any cotton products available anywhere in time. This could provide clothing for the masses as well as blankets.

This approaching episode is referred to in the statement: "There will be a separation of the wheat from the chaff." More like the good from the not so good! Can you still read between the lines? This book should be a WARNING! More than at any other time before in the history of this planet there needs to be a conscious effort to inform the general public of these up and coming events. That is why this book is in your hands now! Now, what are you going to do?

This story that we all call "life" could be over very soon for us all, or it could get to be real ugly before the real fun ever gets started if we're not careful! What a waste of time our own existences would truly become if all we left behind was a planet covered with trash! I would much rather think about all the years to come, celebrating with food, drink, and new friends (as well as old) all gathered around to share this magnificent planet that we've all been given to enjoy. This could be your future, as well! But, only if you desire it? Nothing is set in stone yet, so to speak. Your own failures will come back to haunt only you in time. This thing called "karma" can work for the good or bad, depending on what the individual person has earned for a "pay-back" over his or her many incarnations. It really won't be that hard to determine if you are actually worthy or not. You will be the only one to actually determine your own guilt in the end. Let's all try this time to get it right!

There have been, and will be, more and more reports of strange vehicle sightings in the sky above as time un-folds. Let me assure you once again, most do not come to harm us. Only a very few have had bad intentions in our past. Some in fact, are well aware of our coming dilemma at this juncture in time! In fact, they have even offered assistance following our planetary re-adjustment! A helping hand from another galaxy may be just what is needed now in order to take care of both of those approaching "three and a half-mile wide meteorites" as seen by our own telescopic observations. The one thing we all must understand at this time in history is that "cooperation" has always been the very best policy, no matter where you are from. Our space relatives know this even better than we have learned to date. In fact, some of them have even seen similar things like this happen before on their own worlds over time!

This small bit of information that you have here read today describes several remarkable new observations. I do hope you take what I've written down to heart. Hopefully, those of you who can will consciously try to make the changes necessary so that you will still be here over the next decade to witness these many remarkable changes only dreamed of by the man "George Lucas" in his epic saga entitled "Star Wars." You still may not fully believe that there are other inhabited worlds in other galaxies right now. Who but our divine parents could have come up with a plan like this?

As I mentioned before, this process called evolution is still happening. There will always be new roads to go down, and the work is before us no matter which way we may choose to go. Many people are facing health problems at this very moment that there just doesn't seem to be any good answer for! Why not at least try these different techniques mentioned here today? Hopefully then, you will still be here with me to see this planet through after the coming realignment.

By south influencing all of the fluids that I drink, I'm going to try for the first time, to continue my human existence for up to 1000 years, in a healthy and vibrant body! Sound strange?

Perhaps today, but maybe not one of these tomorrows! Stick around long enough and you could be laughing with all of the survivors of this coming "New World." I have always been told that the very best was yet to be, but now I know for a fact that it truly is.

Your brother,
The New David
